Col. Fellows explained that he appeared before the Committee to-day in consequence of the criticism that had a been made regarding him since the recent charge of Judge Cowing to the Grand Jury, in which he advised the investigation of the alleged corruption of the Police Department.

He said he had nothing to do with the presentation of the matter to the Grand Jury, and declared that he would do nothing which would hamper or embarrass the Committee in its work so long as it continued in session.

He said in conclusion that he was ready to co-operate with the Committee in every way to secure the promotion of the public good.

Senator O'Connor, in behalf of the Committee, thanked Col. Fellows for his assurance, and the latter then recired.

Dr. Parkhurst and Chairman Charles Stewart Smith, of the Committee of LXX., came in during Mr. Goff's speech and remained to listen to the witnesses. Continuing his testimony, Hussey admitted that he had recently brought Bloch had there made a statement in which he declared that Place had received 120 from Mrs. Urchittel.

Place Vainly Accused.

Place Valuly Accused. Place, Bloch said in this statement, which was read by Mr. Moss, went to Mrs. Urchittel's place and there got the money from her. Bloch said he heard Mrs. Urchittel crying and begging Officer Place to let her off, but he searched her, and found $20 in her stocking. This was when the woman lived at 74 Orchard street.

Place to let her off, but he and found $20 in her stocking. This was when the woman lived at 74 Orchard street.

According to Hussey's statement, Mrs. Urchittel at the time was receiving men at her house, and Bloch, his stoolpigeon, had so informed him. He was trying to get evidence against her to arrest her, and only heard of her having paid money to Place through Bloch.

Place went to Mrs. Urchittel's house with two other men, according to Block's statement to the witness, who thereupon arrested her on a warrant charging her with keeping a disorderly place.

The story told by Hussey differed materially from that which he told at the Police Court when Mrs. Urchittel was arraigned, and which Mr. Moss read for the benefit of the Committee.

Hussey at that time testified that Mrs. Urchittel had been driven out of the Eleventh Precinct and arrested then, but he did not mention this in telling his story of the case to Mr. Moss.

He denied that he had been to see Mrs. Urchittel since the arrest, or had sent any one to see her regarding her testimony, and said if any one had made that charge against him he ought to be sent to State prison.

Charles A. Place, now of the Fifth street station, formerly a ward man of the Eldridge street station, was then called. He was confronted with Mrs. Urchittel, and said he had never seen her before.

"Yes: he came there one day and told me that he had been keeping my name from the reporters; that he knew I had been to see Mrs. Urchittel, and had ob-tained 325 from her. He said that he was in trouble, and that I could help

"I started to call in two other officers to listen to our conversation, when Hussey flew out, a..d I haven't seen him about the matter since."

Hussey and Hochstim Robber Her.

Mrs. Urchittel was then recalled to the witness-stand, and Mr. Moss produced a written statement to which the witness admitted she had sworn. ? r. Moss read the statement, which was substantially the same as that which she told to the Committee in her former testimony, except that it was more full and detailed. After leaving her boarding-house at Brownsville, she related how she had bought a cigar store at 37 Hidge street, and, after being there only a few days, a man whom she afterwards recognized as Detective Hussey came in and demanded money from her. She refused at first, and was then to have $50 more ready by the next morning.

She said that Hussey had taken $13 of the money and Hochstim, who had accompanied the detective, got $12. They divided the money in the street. She was then sent back to her home and told to have $50 more ready by the next morning.

Hussey, the statement went on to say, came the next morning to her store and when she didn't have the money arrested her, and she was locked up for several days. When she came out she found that her children had been taken away, and she was obliged to go to a hospital, where she remained several months, and underwent a painful operation.

The statement closed with a piteous appeal to the Committee for the return of her children. Mr. Moss's voice trembled as he read the words written by the interpreter from Mrs. Urchittel's own statement made in Mr. Moss's office, and members of the Committee were visibly affected.

The witness herself sobbed and wept during the reading of the statement, and when it was finished Mr. Moss asked Hussey to stand up.

Senator Badley wanted to know if she had yet been able to get back her children, and was answered by Mr. Goff, who said that the Gerry Society which now had charge of the children, refused to give them up.

"This Society, which is not responsible to the public, has no right to exercise such authority," said Mr. Goff, "to separate parents and children, and yet even the Supreme Court has no power to estore children to their parents when they have once been committed to its care. The law gives it this power."

when they have once been committed to its care. The law gives it this power."

"Mr. Gerry always seems to get what he wants when he comes up to Aibany." remarked Senator O'Connor.

Mr. Goff characterized the system which allowed a private organization to assume an authority beyond the powers of the Court as outrageous, although, he said, he did not doubt that the Society had done a great deal of good.

Isaac Lafkowitz, a dealer in syrups, of 154 Delancey street, testified that he knew Mrs. Urchittel, and that she had kept a perfectly respectable place at 27 Hidge street.

The next witness was Elias Mauvel, who kept a restaurant or care at 141 Delancey street in 1838. He told a rambling story about his experience with Wardman Hussy and his stool-pigeon. Hioch. He said that these two men came to his place frequently after he started in business, and told him that if he wanted to run a game he must put up some money.

Manuel, who afterwards found out that Hussey was a detective, said that the two men put up a job on him to get 1100 which he had saved, as he intended to move and rent a house in Suffolk street.

Manvel said that in all he had paid files to the gang. When he was discharged by the Court, he got back 50 of the money he had paid. The rest Hockstim said had gone to the boys.

Caddie Mauvel, the wife of the previous witness, was then called. She said she didn't know Hussey till he came to arest her husband.

"When Hussey made the arrest," said the witness, "he said, Haven't you a few dollars? If you will pay me somesthing i will leave you here. When my husband said he hadn't anything, Hussey was recalled at this point and Mrs, Mauvel retired.

Hussey Threatened to Shoot. "What did Hussey say to you in court this morning" asked Mr. Goff. "Be careful and give his words exactly."
"He said to me: 'You stinking, dirty of a loafer, I'll blow your brains out. I'll shoot you down like a dog, the first chance I get. You and like Van Leer are responsible for this business."
"That will do," said Mr. Goff.

"Then you mean all these witnesses have sworn to falsehoods?"
"If they said I told Pfeffer I would kill him they did."
Mr. Goff persisted in getting the witness to make a definite answer as to whether the statement of the other witnesses was true or false, and finally Hussey said in desperation.
"Well, if I said it, I must have been crazy, It is pretty hard on a poor man with a family to have this sprung on him," and Hussy broke down in a whimper, and got out his pocket hand-kerchief.

whimper, and got out his pocket hand-kerchief.

He was allowed to leave the witness stand after this, and Mrs. Mauvel resumed her testimony.

She told how she had tried to get ball for her husband when he was locked up, but could not find any one who could do anything except through Mr. Hochstim.

Finally, on the day her husband was taken to court, Mrs. Manvel said she met a man named Mark Alter, who took heet to Silver Dollar Smith's saloon and there she paid him £2. Her husband, however, was not released then, and when she cried in court the officers there drove her out of the building.

"It was only when I went to court that I learned that the charge against my husband was that he had stolen 100 from Mr. Fisch.

Once in that room Mr. Bell's earnestness found vent in speech so loud that he could be heard in the corridor. Gaynor had called at the hotel in a cab last night and enticed Mr. Hill away from his dinner to take a drive that Jasted until midnight. Mr. Hill did certainly drive out with somebody, but neither Clerk De Freest nor Mr. Thacher, who have made of themselves a barrier between Mr. Hill and the reporters, would say whether or not that somebody was Mr. Gaynor.

And right here arises an interesting question: "If Mr. Hill's cab-caller had been Mr. Gaynor, and if their interview in the cab had been satisfactory to Mr. Hill, would not his managers have been allowed to exploit it for the effect it might have had on the antis?"

If the interview was not satisfactory to Mr. Hill, it is natural to suppose that his agents would not care to discuss it.

Mr. Hill's late ride was the cause of his late appearance in public to-day. He was routed out of hed at 9 A. M. by John Boyd Thacher, his first caller, Mr. Thacher had intended to return to Albany last night, but the puzzling situation here seemed to demand his presence and diplomacy, and so he has concluded to remain awile longer. He had a long talk with the Senator this morning, the subject of which was not for publication. It is believed that certain inducements to be offered to the antis for their support of the State ticket were agreed upon and arranged for submission to the recalcitrants to-day.

morning to go on the day watch. He must have been well under the influence of liquor then. At 8 A. M., when he did not answer the roll call, Roundsman Budd went out to find him.

Citizens had seen Murphy in a disgusting state of intoxication in Hanover Square. The roundsman followed up the cue, and later discovered him in the Elevated station there, trying to get home instead of reporting at the station-house.

Roundsman Budd then had the unpleasant task of getting the drunken policeman to the station-house, where he was held in the back room until Police Surgeon Dexter arrived to officially pronounce him drunk.

At first it was denied by Acting Capt. Hogan, but later he admitted that Murphy was in diegrace.

A seedy-looking individual, fifty-three ears old, named Christopher Smith, was charged before Justice McMahor in Yorkville Court to-day by Thomas Crimmins, a saloon-keeper at 29 West Sixty-fourth street, with being a chicken

For a month past Crimmins has been missing chickens, which were stolen almost nightly from his hennery, which he has in the rear of the saloon. Although a strict watch was maintained several nights it proved of no avail The thief in some manner always managed to elude the watcher.

Last night Crimmins saw Smith loitering about the neighborhood, and, sus-pecting him of being the thicf, ne ordered him away. Smith complied, and Crimmins directed his bartender to keep watch upon the hennery for the night. At daybreak this morning the bar tender, much to his surprise, found At daybreak this morning the bartender, much to his surprise, found smith asleep in the yard. He detained him until Crimmins arrived, who, on making an investigation, found that two more of his chickens had disappeared.

Convinced that Smith was the thief, and that he had not taken the chickens away, he continued his search and found them stuck in the legs of a pair of trousers underneath the flooring in the yard. The chickens had been dressed fready for the market. When the bartender saw the trousers he recognized them as having been stolen from him about a week ago.

A policeman was then called and Smith was arrested. When Justice McMahon caught sight of the prisoner he recognized him at a glance and smid:

"Poor Christie, Here again, eh?"
